I.

The wind came in red
through the burnde-over pass
and changed into green
down by the river.
and it will change into violet
and yellow and...
Over fields sown with seed,
an elongated rainbow

II.

Stagnant wind.
Sun above you.
Below you
yhe tremulous algae of aspens.
And my Herat
Trembling too.
Stagnant wind
at five in the afternoon and no birds.

III.

The breeze
so way
like the hair of certain girls.
Like the oceans made samll
in certain old panels
The breeze
now gushes like water,
now overflows
-tenuous balsamic white-
through the canebrakes,
now faints,
where it crashes against the rock of a mountain.

IV.

THE TEACHER
What maiden will marry the wind?

THE CHILD
The maiden of all our desires

THE TEACHER
GAT does the wind give the maiden?

THE CHILD
Whirlwinds of gold. A pileup of maps.

THE TEACHER
And She gives him what it return?
Tell me her name,

THE CHILD
Her name is a secret
Her Herat laid bare
